Chapter 741

Crystal's weekend was very fruitful. She was either being played by Harold or fixing the wedding dress, so she was almost late the next morning. When she was sent to the gate of Princeton University by Harold, she only had time to kiss him on the face before rushing into the school.

When she finally reached the last spot, Crystal breathed a sigh of relief and turned on her mobile phone to see where her classroom was.

The first class was a theoretical class. When she got there, they had already finished distributing the textbooks. Natalie helped her to get one. Looking at the thick textbook, Crystal seemed to have foreseen that there would be endless experiments, homework, and hair fall that could not be saved.

The teacher introduced himself and began to give a lecture. Crystal sat down beside Natalie. Natalie unscrewed a bottle of mineral water and handed it to her. She said, "Come on, Crystal. You are just one minute away from being marked late."

No one knew if it was because of the popularity of the post, no matter where Crystal went, people would point fingers at her, and she could hear people quarrel when she had a meal.

Some people thought that the person who posted the post was just talking nonsense, and some felt that it was reasonable. As a result, the quarrel between the two sides became fiercer and fiercer, and there were also signs of the change from spiritual attack to physical attack. Crystal looked at the group of people in front of her in a daze and asked, "... Do I have to make it clear?"

Annette patted her on the shoulder and said, "I think it's necessary. After all..."

Before she finished her words, she heard a "bang" and the table was kicked over. The person sitting in the chair impatiently took off his headset and said in a highly irritable tone, "... Can't you let me eat in peace?"

Those who had quarreled with each other before instantly became as quiet as cicadas in the winter.

Crystal was really coaxed,"... Forget it, I don't want to make things big for a pregnant

Otherwise, the quarrel will only get worse." Annette said, "We don't have classes in

"Crush?" Annette rolled her eyes and said, "Everyone in the world knows what she is thinking, okay?"

"Speaking of which... I haven't seen Phyllis for a long time." Natalie picked up all the green pepper and cauliflower that she disliked to one side and said, "Didn't she come to school?"

“Yes.” The boy answered casually. He was wearing a pure black T-shirt with no pattern on it. There was only a silver skull pendant hanging on his neck. The gold stone earring on his left ear shone with a magnificent light, which made him look more arrogant and unruly.

In just a face-to-face encounter, Crystal felt that the man named Lars was like a wolf on the grassland. He did not look gentle and kind at all. He was proud and arrogant. The band on his forehead represented him, and the corners of his eyes, which were covered with tiny scars, were shining with a cold light.

Annette was normally talkative. When she saw him, she quickly moved closer to Natalie. Crystal glanced at him but didn’t say anything. Lars stopped. He looked down at Crystal’s fluffy head and asked Bound, “Is she the person you like?”

“...” Bound immediately said, “What nonsense are you talking about?”

“You don’t have good taste,” Lars said, “I feel sorry for you.”

Bound said with a smile, "It's just a matter of responsibility. You don't have to thank me. But I have something to tell you."

"Hmm?"

Bound's face was slightly serious. "Lars... is more childish. You'd better take a detour when you see him. No one knows what he will do."

Crystal also had a serious look on her face. "As expected, Senior, you also think that he is a big child with problems."

"..." Bound smiled helplessly. "Yes, that's the case, but don't say that in front of him."

Crystal nodded. "Then we will leave first."

Bound made a sound of agreement. When they saw Crystal's back disappear, the people inside swarmed out and tried to grab the candy.

"..." Bound said, "She gave me the candy to thank me."

"I remember that you don't like candy. We will help you finish them."

In the shadow of the umbrella, Crystal had no expression on her face.

It was not until this time that she knew why the post-writer didn't post evidence to support her post. It was because the most convincing evidence was right here.

Seeing that Crystal did not speak, Mia added, "Crystal, don't worry. I know I can't drag you down. I just really missed you and wanted to see you badly. I'll leave right away."

Debbie wanted to say something else, but Mia grabbed her and said, "Mom, now the child has grown up and has come to a big city to study. She doesn't want her classmates to know that she's from the village. It's normal. Don't make things difficult for her. Let's go."

"Why should we leave?" Debbie said, "As a mother, you've suffered a lot. You worked so hard to save money to raise her and send her to the college. Now that she's started her university life, she wants to kick you away. And you still wanted to come and see her? If I were you, I would pretend that I have never raised such an ungrateful person!"

Annette's words caused a stir in an instant. She couldn't bear to see Crystal being wronged, so she continued, "Moreover!"

"When Crystal was sent back to her parents' home, she gave them a lot of money. Now when they saw that Crystal's family was rich, they wanted to completely rely on her and treat her as a cash cow... How could there be such a good thing in the world? Crystal has a good temper and still chose to talk to them calmly. If it were me, I would have called the police directly. Are you saying that she's unfilial? Why don't you try to experience such a blessing?"

The people who had spoken before immediately blushed and hid in the crowd to leave.

"That's enough." Crystal tugged at Annette's sleeve and said, "Aren't we going to eat ice cream? We shouldn't stay under the sun for too long."

“Why don’t you defend yourself? If you don’t make it clear, other people will continue slandering you!” Annette was furious. “You are so good-tempered!”

After eating ice cream, they went to the nearby shopping mall. It was almost six o’clock when they were ready to go back to school. When Crystal arrived at the gate of the shopping mall, her cell phone suddenly rang. The caller ID was “Harold”.

Crystal made a gesture to Natalie and Annette, signaling them to go out first. She leaned against a pot of landscape planting and answered the phone. “Hello? What’s wrong?”

“Come out.” The man’s voice was a little hoarse. “I’m waiting for you outside.”

Crystal looked up subconsciously. Through the clean glass wiped by the cleaner, she could see a black Bentley parked by the roadside. It seemed that he had noticed her gaze and slowly pressed the horn. At the same time, Harold’s voice came from the receiver. “Hurry up. It’s illegal to park outside the mall. If I get a fine, I’ll deduct it from your pocket money.”

Crystal said in her heart, “Since when do I have pocket money?” But she still walked out quickly. After telling Natalie and Annette her family was coming to pick her up, she got in the car quickly.

It was hot outside, and there was an air conditioner in the car. The smell of fresh lime from the car perfume bought by Crystal filled the air. She sat in the passenger seat and asked, “Where are we going?”

Harold put his fingers on the steering wheel and said, “I’m picking you up for dinner.”

Early the next morning, Crystal was carrying the breakfast that she had brought for Natalie and Annette. Dana had made steamed buns and freshly squeezed soy milk in the morning. She felt that the food was really delicious, so she brought some for her good friends.

But as soon as she arrived at the school gate, she was stopped by Debbie and Mia.

Obviously, the two of them had arrived a long time ago and were squatting at the door to wait for her. When they saw Crystal, they rushed over in a hurry. Crystal only felt a gust of wind blowing in front of her, and Mia had already pulled her sleeve.

“...” Crystal thought that they were going to put on a show like yesterday and was about to enjoy their performance in silence. Unexpectedly, they were very straightforward today. They went straight to the point and said, “I know you have money. As long as you are willing to give me enough money, I promise that I won’t come to you again in the future!”

Crystal thanked him and quickly ran away.

Back in the dormitory, Natalie had just changed her clothes. When she saw the lunch box in Crystal's hand, she cried out, "Why are you being so considerate? Did you do something wrong yesterday?"

Crystal coughed, turned around and closed the door. She placed the lunch box on the table and said, "I just went to accompany my boyfriend. It's not something wrong, right?"

Annette opened the lunch box and sighed, "If those people in the university know that you already have a boyfriend, they would definitely cry to death, and their tears would flood Princeton University. Ah, it smells so good!"

Natalie came over, took out a glass of soy milk, and asked, "What's the filling?"
