

Chapter 794 Perfect Cover

Elliana pressed the button, instantly silencing Eva's cries. The effect was immediate, just as Miguel had gone quiet when his chip was triggered. Eva now stood mute.

A few moments later, Eva rose mechanically and positioned herself before Elliana, awaiting her next instruction.

Across the room, Wanda cowered on the floor, terror etched across her face. She scrambled away, pleading desperately, "No, please! I can't go through with this. I don't want that chip! I refuse to be someone's puppet!"

Elliana's face betrayed no sympathy. Gripping a syringe, she advanced. "It's far too late for regrets. You lost your right to choose the moment you created chaos. If you'd just stayed in line, I would have let you off the hook."

"Ah!" Wanda's shriek echoed through the room.

Panic flooded Wanda's veins, granting her a desperate burst of strength. She sprang up and darted toward the exit, hoping to escape.

Elliana didn't chase her. One sharp glance to the bodyguards was enough; they lunged forward, caught Wanda mid-run, and slammed her to the floor.

Without hesitation, Elliana knelt down, injected the chip, and activated the system.

Within moments, Wanda went still. Like Eva, her will was gone.

With the situation under control, Elliana instructed her team to transfer both Eva and Wanda to Delta. There, they and Miguel would be supervised by Clifton.

As soon as Eva and Wanda were removed from the room, Elliana sighed, relief washing over her. Finally, she could redirect her focus toward the search for her mother. Only one lead remained—the Thompson family. To make progress, she needed to break into their inner circle and quietly dig into the secrets of their past.

Gaining the Thompson family trust, however, would prove difficult; they were both powerful and shrouded in mystery.

After weighing her options, Elliana resolved to start by compiling every scrap of information about the Thompson family, hoping to find a crack in their defenses.

With the strategy set, Elliana, Cole, and Milton quickly set their intelligence networks in motion, determined to collect details on the Thompson family without drawing attention.

After the arrangements were made, Elliana and Cole returned home. Three days later, Cole made an unexpected breakthrough.

It turned out that after Elliana, disguised as a man, had attended the Evans family banquet and revealed herself as Milena, the Thompson family had secretly dispatched agents to Ublento to investigate Milena's whereabouts. Their movements had been so discreet that almost no one caught wind of it. Cole's men had stumbled upon the information purely by accident. However, the reason for their clandestine search for Milena remained a mystery.

Elliana and Cole made their way back to Harmony Estate, eager to share the latest intel with Arthur and Milton.

As soon as they arrived, Elliana outlined her strategy. "The Thompson family is actively searching for Milena. Using that identity is our only ticket inside. I'm heading to Yruzias as Milena."

The Thompson family controlled Yruzias's economy and held absolute power there. Stepping into their domain as Milena would surely put Elliana on their radar and unmask what they truly wanted.

"I don't think this is a good idea," Milton countered, frowning. "From what I've gathered, most people who want Milena's help are seeking cures for incurable diseases. But there's no record of anyone in the Thompson family being seriously ill. I fear their motive lies elsewhere."

Arthur voiced his concern, "We really don't know what the Thompson family is capable of. If there's something more going on, you could be putting yourself in danger."

Cole clasped Elliana's hand firmly. "They both have a point. I don't want you to risk your life in Yruzias. Let's figure another way out."

But Elliana stood firm. "This is our most effective lead and probably our only chance to find something. If we hold back now, another opportunity might never come. I'm done waiting. I have to act."

Recognizing her resolve, the three men relented, immediately shifting their focus to backup plans and rescue contingencies, preparing for anything that might go wrong.

In the midst of their planning, Elliana's phone lit up with an incoming call from Levi. She answered, curiosity piqued.

When the call connected, Levi spoke quietly. "Could you help me out with something?"

Elliana raised an eyebrow. It was rare for Levi to request favors; he usually stayed silent unless there was work to be done. With mild surprise, she asked, "What do you need?"

Levi replied, "Could you come to Yruzias to treat my uncle? He needs your medical expertise."

To treat Levi's uncle? Elliana almost laughed out loud. Here she was, racking her brain for an excuse to show up in Yruzias as Milena without raising suspicion, and Levi had just given her the perfect pretext.

While everyone knew Milena had a capable assistant named Levi, few realized this was the same Levi who belonged to the Yruzias royal family. His uncle was none other than Howell Douglas, the retired king of Yruzias, making the cover story flawless.