

Chapter 823 Blessed Beyond Measure

Rita's cheeks were still flushed from Elliana's earlier teasing, but spotting a perfect chance for payback, she couldn't resist. "Elliana, take a look at your husband; he's being extra sweet today!"

Elliana arched an eyebrow in disbelief. Who would have guessed her own mother, even with her memory loss, would tease her back just to get even?

Milton chimed in with a soft laugh, "Honestly, Dad and Cole just showed real devotion and the mark of a refined gentleman."

Milton then moved forward to greet the Thompson family, eager to show his respect.

Edgar's and Elsie's faces glowed with happiness, their delight plain for all to see. Their eldest grandson, so tall, striking, and gifted, had quickly won their hearts. Once devastated by Karlee's misdeeds and convinced they'd never see worthy successors, they now felt blessed beyond measure. Not only did they have a wonderful granddaughter, but they'd gained an equally outstanding grandson. Their fortune seemed almost unreal, as though good luck kept finding them again and again.

"Why don't we continue this conversation at home since we're all family?" Kaleb suggested, his smile gentle and welcoming.

The whole group made their way to the Thompson residence.

Following breakfast, everyone gathered in the spacious drawing room.

Getting to the bottom of Rita's past was the Thompson family's top priority. After a bit of polite conversation, Kaleb smoothly turned the topic to her, prompting Elliana to recount the entire ordeal from start to finish.

As the last pieces fell into place, Edgar slammed his palm on the table in outrage. "So, it was Maxine all along! She actually plotted against us and stole my daughter. I'll skin her alive!"

Elliana cleared her throat, trying to ease the tension. "Grandpa, Maxine has already passed away."

Edgar froze in shock, but Kaleb quickly jumped in. "Maxine may be gone, but the Griffiths family remains! I'll see to it that the new head pays, and the entire clan faces justice!"

Elliana coughed awkwardly. "The new leader of the Griffiths family is actually me."

Both Edgar and Kaleb stared at her in disbelief.

Elsie's face showed nothing but confusion. "Elliana, how did you become the head of the Griffiths family?"

Elliana hadn't intended to bring up that part, but when pressed, she reluctantly explained what had happened in the snowy mountains.

Jenifer gasped in shock. "Wait, Elliana, you're Death Thorn?"

Elliana offered a gentle smile and nodded. "That's right. I am."

Everyone sat in stunned silence. They had always known Elliana was remarkable, but never guessed she was that extraordinary. Not only did she hold impressive titles in so many industries, but she had also become a legend and a powerhouse in her own right. Clearly, they had underestimated her all along.

Today, the Thompson family felt luckier than ever; their family's newfound honor was something that would shine for generations.

Just moments ago, Edgar had been fuming, determined to get justice for his daughter. Now, he had nowhere to aim his anger. The villain was gone, and his granddaughter had ended up inheriting everything from the enemy's empire. To go after the Griffith family now would mean turning on his own flesh and blood.

Kaleb couldn't help but feel a blend of relief and bemusement. The wrongs that had haunted the Thompson family for decades, wounds reopened with such intensity, had somehow been resolved without further conflict. All that was left was to celebrate the reunion.

Elsie urged her husband and son, "Elliana has put things to rest already. Let's leave the past behind and focus on the happiness of having our family together again."

Jenifer nodded enthusiastically. "Elsie's right. We should cherish the happiness in front of us."

After exchanging glances, Edgar and Kaleb broke into warm smiles, finding themselves in rare agreement.

Just like that, a feud that had simmered for decades dissolved in an instant.

Accepting Edgar and Elsie's invitation, Elliana and her loved ones spent some time at the Thompson family home. With Kaleb and Jenifer as their guides, they explored the scenic beauty of Yruzias.

Two weeks later, Elliana and Cole found themselves longing for their children, and they decided it was time to return to Ublento.

Arthur and Milton had to cut their stay short due to work and began making plans to leave Yruzias.

As everyone prepared to say goodbye, Arthur turned to Rita and suggested she come back with him.

Though Rita's memories still eluded her, the awkwardness between her and Arthur had faded, replaced by an easy, gentle rapport.

Arthur longed to show Rita the homes and places they once shared, hoping that familiarity might jog her memory. Their love story had been precious, and he yearned for her to share those memories once more; he couldn't bear to be the only one who remembered.

The Thompsons were reluctant to part with Rita so soon, but knowing she and Arthur had already lost twenty years together, they understood and agreed.

With everyone's blessings, the group left Yruzias together.