

Wizard 553

Chapter 553: Transcendent Perception Advancement! Domineering Vision? (4)

"Life is full of surprises," Levi lamented.

He opened the material to see if there was anything he needed.

He discovered that mithril and Luminant gold could also be exchanged for these precious alchemy materials, but it required more merit points.

Ten cattles of mithril cost about 20 merit points, while Luminant gold would cost him 100 merit points.

Levi wanted to melt his Tyrant and change it into mithril and Luminant gold. That way, Tyrant would be even stronger.

Moreover, he had just discovered a blueprint of second-circle alchemical creatures in the knowledge classification.

Gravedigger Blueprint, 20,000 Merit Points!

"Gravedigger, the upgraded model of the Corpse Digger. It was modified and formed on the basis of the Corpse Digger's technology. Its strength is comparable to a Second-Circle Wizard. Its entire body is made of rare alchemy materials like mithril, and it can fight against a second-circle senior wizard. If its entire body is made of Luminant gold, it can fight against a Third-Circle Wizard for a moment."

Levi's eyes lit up at the Gravedigger's introduction.

"Fight the third-circle for a while..."

It was a simple description, but it had an extremely powerful effect.

The difference between a second-circle and a third-circle was huge. Even an ordinary second-circle senior wizard would find it difficult to resist a Third-Circle Wizard for a moment.

However, tomb diggers made of pure Luminant gold could do it.

However, it was obvious that the forging cost of such Gravediggers was very high.

Levi estimated that the cost of drawings and various materials alone was about 100,000 Merit Points.

For an ordinary First-Circle Wizard, killing a level-one monster was only worth 50 merit points.

They had to hunt 2,000 level 1 demonic creatures to accumulate so many. The time spent might be decades or even hundreds of years.

In terms of the efficiency of earning merit points, pharmacists were still more efficient.

"Second item on my shopping list. Gravedigger Blueprint."

In the end, after looking at the other goods, Levi added the items that he liked to his shopping list and realized that it required a total of 200,000 merit points.

"Alright, I'll slowly accumulate them. I'll start with the breathing technique, then the Wizard of Oz, the Gravedigger's blueprint, and so on."

As for the secret medicine needed to cultivate the Knight Breathing Technique, this merit shop also had it, but the variety was incomplete and the quantity was very small. It was also extremely expensive and could not satisfy Levi's daily cultivation of the Knight Breathing Technique.

Therefore, he had to take advantage of Leviathan and the others.

To Levi's disappointment, even in the Merit Shop, he did not see any Eye of the Devil for sale.

He didn't know if it wasn't there or if it was too popular. It was bought as soon as it was put on the shelves.

In the following days, Levi's life was regular and fulfilling. On one hand, he paid attention to the development of the war, and on the other hand, he focused on Pharmacy and cultivation.

In short, his safety in Riptide City's Pharmacy was not a problem.

Most of the wizards who came with him back then had become combat wizards.

Many wizards had already been injured or even sacrificed their lives in the demon – hunting mission.

This was the difference between technical work and physical work!

Levi was very glad that he had chosen the pharmacist profession back then. Otherwise, his outcome would not have been much better.

Although his strength far exceeded that of ordinary low-level wizards, it was far from enough in this dangerous sixth warzone.

If a level 3 demon suddenly appeared when he was on a demon-hunting mission, he might be in danger.

Therefore, Levi had come to terms with it. He would save money by doing Pharmacy step by step. Unless there were special circumstances, he would not go out of the city to hunt demons.

In order to exchange for the Greenfield Immortal House as soon as possible, he worked hard to make the Iceheart Potion every day. Currently, the demand for this Iceheart Potion at the front line was relatively high.

After most wizards took this potion and developed resistance to demonic aura, the corresponding demand would decrease.

Huffman was very satisfied with Levi's Pharmacy work because Levi could complete the mission Huffman gave him several times a day.

This allowed Huffman to be ahead of the other four supervisors in the performance assessment of the Iceheart Potion every month.

There was also competition among the five supervisors of the Tower of Pharmacists. Every once in a while, the military would reward the department supervisors with rich merit points.

Huffman also benefited from Levi's efforts.

Although Levi kept a low profile, he gradually gained some fame in the Tower of Pharmacists. He was considered the most promising pharmacist seedling to advance to the second-circle in recent years.

It couldn't be helped. The Tower of Pharmacists' circle was only so big. Levi wanted to hide his strength, but the conditions didn't allow it.

Moreover, he had thought it through now. He still had to show some talent. This way, whether it was in front of Huffman or the military, he would be of greater use.

In a state of war, the more popular one was, the safer one would be. Moreover, once one entered the second-circle, just like Grimm, their status in the Tower of Pharmacists was second only to the five supervisors, and they would also have some say.

On this day, Levi was making Pharmacy when there was a knock on the door.

He opened the door, and a slightly plump and young-looking wizard stood there with a smile.

"I just moved here. I'm next door to you. My name is Tommen, a senior first-circle pharmacist." The plump young wizard smiled.

"Hello, can I help you?" Levi asked.

"It's nothing. I'm just coming over to say hi. I'm Grimm's friend," Tommen said.

"So you're Grimm's friend. Nice to meet you." Levi smiled.

"Alright, go ahead. I won't disturb you anymore. I just want to familiarize myself, hehe." With that, Tommen returned to his room..
