Chapter 568: Legendary Physique Breaks the Limit, Death Ember Breathing Technique! (2)

This fellow had agreed to use his family's power to help Levi investigate the whereabouts of Teacher and the others. Regardless of whether he could succeed or not, it was always good to have more hope.

Levi headed to the wizard airship dock alone.

"There's no hurry for the meditation supplementary potion. I'll take it slow.

Without the potion, my cultivation won't be slow."

So far, Levi and the others' main Pharmacy missions were red, blue, and green potions and some healing potions used in wartime. They had never made meditation supplementary potions.

He knew that Huffman definitely had the formula for the second-circle meditation supplementary potions. Levi had been waiting for a chance to freeload.

For low-level wizards like Levi, who had elemental affinity talents, potions were just icing on the cake. They were not necessary.

However, after the intermediate level, even the Children of the Elements needed a large number of potions as support.

At that time, on one hand, it depended on talent, and on the other hand, it depended on resources.

As the Children of the Elements, they did not need to worry about resources. All the major wizard organizations would fight for them.

Although Levi's talent was enhanced by the Special Effect of the breathing technique, in the eyes of wizards, he was still a Child of Chaos.

After reaching the third-circle, he also had to make a choice. Should he continue to be a secret cultivator and rely on himself, or should he expose some of his talents and enter a large wizard organization to cultivate?

Levi was now inclined to expose his Pharmacy talent and use it to pry open the unattainable threshold. Then, he would lead the overall cultivation of his wizard.

The current Riptide City was the most suitable place for Levi to rise.

He heard from Grimm that the Tower of Riptide, where the two city lords were located, would occasionally release some spots for secret cultivators or sorcerers who wanted to jump ship in Riptide City to enter.

Joining a high-level wizard organization like the Tower of Riptide would allow them to enjoy some resources and their status would be higher than others.

Moreover, if he joined the Tower of Riptide, the interest group behind Rex would think twice before making a move on him.

Levi had also figured out the entry requirements.

Firstly, there was no need to mention the Children of the Elements. With this talent, they could be specially recruited regardless of their cultivation.

Secondly, dual-elemental affinity required one to become a First-Circle Wizard before the age of 30.

Thirdly, those who became Third-Circle Wizards before the age of 100 had no restrictions on their talent.

Finally, there were elders with Pharmacy, weapon-making, arrays, alchemy, scholars, and other skills.

Of course, if you were a Fourth-Circle Wizard or a Fifth-Circle Wizard, you could naturally join them. The Tower of Riptide definitely welcomed the strong.

However, the fourth-circle and fifth-circle were so far away that ordinary wizards did not even dare to think about it.

To Levi, the first two were naturally out of the question, so there was no problem with the third and fourth.

He was only 53 years old, but he was already a Second-Circle Wizard. It wouldn't be a problem for him to step into the third-circle before he was 100

Years old...

What's more, his Knight Breathing Technique might be able to continue producing more elemental affinity Special Effects. Perhaps one Special Effect might not be comparable to the Children of the Elements, but little added up.

He didn't believe that with so many Special Effects and the interface itself, he couldn't crush the Children of the Elements.

Therefore, the third-circle before the age of 100 was a conservative estimate for Levi.

If it was fast, it wouldn't take so long.

At the airship port.

Levi looked at Riptide City behind him and stepped onto the airship.

On the airship, there were also some wizards who took leave to go home like him.

Exhaustion was written all over their faces. Some of them were even disabled because they did not have time to undergo treatment. In the end, they had to amputate their limbs and install alchemical prosthetics from the military.

These were all combat wizards. As expected, after carrying out demon-hunting missions for a long time, one's shoes would get wet if they often walked by the river.

This was why Levi wanted to stay in the Tower of Pharmacists.

The battlefield was not a game. There were no so-called level restrictions. Even in the periphery, there might be terrifying level 3 monsters that would suddenly appear and bring about a destructive blow.

In fact, if the Abyss Well was really opened, Levi would not be surprised if the high-level demon lord of the Abyssal Civilization suddenly appeared in Riptide City.

Levi also saw the Wind-Chasing Arrow Kankur in the corner. He sat alone and stared at a portrait in a daze.

Levi vaguely remembered that Kankur seemed to have a lover. It seemed that she had most likely died in the war.

Kankur only had one leg left, and his other leg had become an alchemical prosthetic.

Currently, Riptide City lacked wizards who had mastered the spells of the Life School of Thought. There were too few healing wizards, and they were urgently applying to the headquarters.

It was very difficult for ordinary healing potions to regrow broken limbs.

Coupled with the corrosion of the demonic aura, Kankur could only accept the alchemical prosthetics modification.

Levi looked at this scene and felt a little emotional.

Compared to Kankur and the others, he should be lucky enough.

Half a month later.

The wizard airship successfully arrived at Bass Island.

After getting off the airship, Levi did not delay and quickly rushed to his Black Fire Island.

From afar, Levi could see the outline of the Black Fire Island. With his Perception, the array was intact and there were no signs of damage.

Before they reached the island, Leviathan's cheerful Whale Song sounded.

In an instant, it was as if a rallying order had been blown.

On the shore, the Red Sand Ape, Poison Fire Bone Snake, Crimson Fire Dragon Lizard, and Black Flame Demonic Bird all came out to welcome Levi.

Seeing this, Levi was relieved.

Thank God his house hadn't been robbed.

Firstly, it might be because Black Fire Island was too remote. Secondly, his Shadowless Maze Array had worked.

It had been more than two years since they last met. These guys were all full of vigor and energy. They surrounded Levi and licked him..
