

Wizard 670

Chapter 670: Divine Tower! (2)

Previously, he had mainly pretended to be old to survive in the mortal world.

Now that he no longer needed to become a mortal, he naturally had to return to his favorite appearance, which was a young man.

Looking at the well-defined and handsome young man in the mirror, Levi felt like a school kid.

His well-proportioned and powerful body was not weak at all. It was not an exaggeration.

"I'm quite handsome." Levi praised himself.

The Great Black Sky Curtain danced around Levi like a Black Snake.

Levi's spiritual force had reached 101 points.

Every time he broke through, not only would his spiritual force increase by one point, but the quality of his previous spiritual force would also increase.

Therefore, after the third -circle, the upper limit of spell power represented by one point of spiritual force became 40 points.

Levi's spell power had already reached 4,000 points.

This allowed him to use the Great Black Sky Curtain more smoothly than before, and his spell power was no longer so scarce.

"After the third-circle, the main spells that I've mastered need to be updated and iterated."

Levi opened the interface and prepared to study the direction of learning spells after the third-circle according to his current spell system.

Besides the third-circle Glacial Sword Finger, Levi had mastered the following second-ring spells on the proficiency panel:

Earth Spirit Shield, King Kong Rock Body, Crimson Copper Armor, Five

Fireballs Technique, Spider and Scorpion Song, Thunderbird, Sword Blade

Storm, Glacier Descent, and Dream Infiltration Wind —a total of nine types.

Of these nine second-ring spells, other than the newly learned Dream Infiltration Wind, the other second-ring spells had all been cultivated to the limit.

Dream Infiltration Wind was an auxiliary spell. Although it was only a second-circle spell, even if Levi became a fourth-circle or fifth-circle in the future, he could continue to use this spell.

Among the three defensive spells, the Earth Spirit Shield was Levi's second-circle defensive field. After advancing to the third-circle, it also temporarily served as a defensive field function. When Levi obtained a better third-circle spell, he could replace it.

Although the King Kong Rock Body and the Crimson Copper Armor were only second-circle, they had been cultivated to the limit after all. Coupled with Levi's Aether Dominance's Special Effect, they could still be used at the third -circle stage.

After the Third-Circle Wizard, the difficulty of obtaining spells became higher and higher. This caused most Third-Circle Wizards to still mainly use second-ring spells.

Third-circle spells were all his trump cards.

Thunderbird and Five Fireballs Technique could both be cultivated to the advanced version of third-circle spells, but Levi didn't have the corresponding spell model crystal ball.

"From the looks of it, finding or creating a third-circle defensive spell as my defensive field should be the most important thing. I'm not in a hurry for anything else."

"After the third-circle, the core is the cultivation of innate spells. How to solidify spells on the magic ring is the most important. The power of innate spells is powerful, and they can be instantly cast. It's not something ordinary spells can compare to."

Therefore, in the third-circle stage, there were two important criteria to differentiate between ordinary third-circle and third-circle seniors.

The first was the standard of spiritual force.

101-140 was an ordinary third-circle spiritual force. 141-200 was a third-circle senior.

The second criterion was the number of innate spells one could master.

If one mastered an innate spell, they could only be called a third-circle ordinary wizard.

Even if one's spiritual force reached the standard of a senior, if one didn't solidify a second third-circle innate spell, they would only be a "fake senior".

For example, Lehman was one such example. This kind of third-circle senior was usually not recognized by the public.

And once he mastered the second innate spell, he could be called a third-circle senior wizard.

As for how many third-circle spells he had mastered, it was no longer a symbol to distinguish between ordinary third-circle spells and senior third-circle spells.

This was different from the previous low-level wizards.

Learning five third-circle spells was not as good as mastering an innate spell.

Of course, for wizards, the more third-circle spells they mastered, the better. However, everyone's energy was limited.

How to maximize their strength within a limited period of time was also the focus of a wizard's consideration.

Therefore, after the third -circle, the wizards spent most of their time thinking of ways to solidify third-circle spells on the magic ring, forming innate spells, and then constantly cultivating innate spells.

Some wizards would only cultivate one powerful innate spell in their entire lives, and they would only be able to use one move.

And third-circle senior wizards who mastered three innate spells were also called Three Talent Wizards.

Such wizards were rare in the third-circle.

Theoretically speaking, if he mastered two innate spells and raised his spiritual force to the maximum of the third-circle, he would be able to advance to the fourth-circle.

An innate spell was powerful, but at the same time, it meant that it was difficult to master. It had a high requirement on the Spell Caster's spell talent.

Many wizards were actually forced to advance to the fourth-circle after mastering two innate spells because of time constraints and other reasons.

Only those with great perseverance and talent would stay calm and master three innate spells before advancing to the fourth-circle.

Levi definitely wanted to master three innate spells before advancing.

This was because, in the entire Intermediate Wizard stage, there were three innate spell slots in each ring. In theory, a Fifth-Circle Wizard could master nine innate spells under the maximum state. They were called Nine Talent

Wizards..
