

Wizard 688

Chapter 688: Bug Luminist! (3)

"I was once part of a wizard organization, but it has long been annihilated by dark wizards. Now, I am just a nameless wanderer, a nomadic wizard with no affiliation," sighed Levi.

"Alas, this war has turned many into nomadic wizards. Countless wizard families have been destroyed, and people are scattered, seeking refuge everywhere," Old Golden Lion remarked.

"Sir Levi, do you have any plans for the future?" Wham asked.

"I may leave this outer sea region and head to the inner sea region or the Star Sea to seek a way of survival," Levi replied.

"The Endless Sea is currently in continuous warfare. The inner sea region and the Star Sea may have even stronger enemy forces, and the situation of the war could be more severe. Sir Levi, please be cautious," Wham warned.

"Yes, I heard that high-level wizard organizations in the inner sea region have been annihilated. It's truly unimaginable. Only a primordial soul wizard managed to escape, leaving the wizard tower completely destroyed. A single primordial soul cannot endure for long in the material world. If they can't find a suitable body, doom awaits him," Old Golden Lion recalled recent intelligence, his expression heavy and filled with resignation.

For the powerful beings in the outer sea region like them, high-level wizard organizations and primordial soul wizards were unimaginable existences.

Such formidable figures came perilously close to falling, revealing the brutality of this war.

Keep in mind that this war had only just begun a few decades ago, and high-level wizards had already perished.

The future might see this war persist for hundreds of years, and during this time, no one knew how many powerful wizards in the Wizard World would fall.

After the war, the eagerly awaited distribution of spoils followed.

Levi only took Clay's storage bags. The rest, including the minions, Yefa's storage bags, and other assets of the Black Water Tower, were left for the two major families to divide themselves.

The distribution of benefits was the easiest stage to stir conflicts.

However, the two families had no complaints about Levi taking Clay's storage bags.

After all, as long as they weren't fools, they could see that Levi had made the most significant contribution in this battle.

Without Levi, they wouldn't have stood a chance against the Black Water Tower.

Even if Levi took a portion from the remaining loot, they wouldn't have objected.

Actions spoke louder than words.

The strength Levi displayed, even if only the tip of the iceberg, was enough to awe the two major families and earn their respect.

In such chaotic times, one couldn't simply evade challenges; sometimes, it was necessary to flex one's muscles to avoid trouble.

Evasion was not the goal but merely a means. It needed constant adjustment and progress with growing strength.

The members of the two major families were decent individuals, and naturally, Levi wouldn't act too harshly. In all things, it was essential to leave room for reconciliation and future encounters.

Although Levi's current strength was not inferior to the two major families, these families had deep roots in the Yellow Earth Continent, being the rulers and local authorities of the entire Outer Sea Region's Area 7.

Maintaining good relations with the two major families also provided Levi with a retreat route.

After the distribution of spoils, Levi temporarily returned to Lion King City.

He took out Clay's storage bags, and on these bags, there were some complex restriction arrays. Fortunately, Levi, being a second-circle array wizard, had a thorough understanding of this aspect.

Otherwise, for other wizards without the corresponding spells, it might be impossible to open the storage bags.

Levi felt fortunate that as his realm improved, the enemies' storage bags were often no longer standard. Many were customized with solidified miniature arrays, requiring different activation spells for each storage bag.

The way of the array wizard was profound and extensive, and as one's realm increased, the effects became more pronounced.

It was said that some powerful battle groups within the Pan-Plane Wizard Council utilized massive war arrays refined by array wizards as the foundation, forming formidable battle formations.

Relying on the advantages of battle formations and overwhelming numbers, there was once a battle group that, with a demigod-level multidimensional plane master comparable to a Ninth-Circle Wizard, annihilated a battle group.

It could be said that arrays, especially military arrays, were treasures that could overcome the strong with the weak.

"Unfortunately, my Book of Cypher is only the first volume. I don't know where the second and third volumes are now..."

Levi sighed with regret.

Although he hadn't heard of Master Cypher, he was undoubtedly a hidden master of arrays.

His Book of Cypher, even with just the basic first volume, provided Levi with profound knowledge and theories on array foundations, benefiting him greatly.

Levi withdrew his attention.

Clay had many storage items, most of which were casting and experimentation materials. Only this item with an array restriction caught Levi's interest. Upon opening it, the first thing that caught his eye was a mountain-like Aether

Stone.

"So many..."

Levi counted them.

A whopping three hundred thousand Aether Stones.

Goodness, there were even three-quarters of a Rex!

Levi was surprised.

So far, Rex held the top spot in Levi's Underworld Wealth Ranking, serving as a unit of measurement. Meanwhile, Clay ranked second.

In terms of strength, three Rex were no match for Clay.

However, due to Rex's role as a pharmacist supervisor, he became the wealthiest among the third-circle wizards killed by Levi..
