Chapter 988: Hell! (2)

These dead puppets could be brought in.

Of course, items that could be controlled, like Guillermo a corpse demon, could not be brought in. However, the core of the corpse demon was this shell.

As long as his body entered the Dark Ancient Tower, Levi could find a way to make them move.

"Next, if I want to control this Blood-Armored Corpse Demon, I still need to refine a spirit-type undead creature into it to turn it into the corpse demon's... soul!"

Otherwise, the corpse demon would not be able to move on its own.

Fortunately, Levi was already prepared to summon hell creatures.

A long time ago, he had learned a summoning spell from the School of Hell.

Now, with his strength, summoning a fourth-circle undead spirit should not be a problem.

Summoning it, capturing it alive, and refining it into the corpse demon's body.

"However, this is my first time summoning a hell creature. In order to avoid any accidents, I need to make more preparations."

He found an uninhabited valley and began to set up an array inside.

"Fourth-circle array, Demon Cage. It's a small scale array, easy to set up and can be carried around. It's a control type of array and was originally developed for the bloody battle with the Abyss. Capturing those hell creatures shouldn't be a problem."

This array was one of the few fourth-circle arrays he had mastered. It would also be one of his trump cards when he entered Dark Ancient Tower in the future.

Such an array was definitely not as powerful as the giant formation of the Hell of the Seven Kings. That kind of giant array needed to rely on the power of the elements wandering between heaven and earth to operate. Otherwise, relying on the Aether Stone would consume an extremely terrifying amount of energy. Thus, there were requirements for the choice of terrain and environment.

As for the Demon Cage, it could be quickly set up during battle.

Moreover, it only needed to consume Aether Stones to operate.

After setting up the array, Levi had Miraya, Raja, Phoenix, and the body-tempering clone, Metal Voodoo, guard the four positions of the array.

Such a lineup could be said to have given the other party enough respect.

"Fourth-circle spell, Summoning Undead Spirits! Through this spell, one could communicate with an undead creature from the first four levels of hell. If there was a mutual choice, one could become the undead partner of the School of Death wizard and fight for them. The wizard has to pay the corresponding price for it."

"Otherwise, if it's light, the next summoning won't be successful. If it's serious, some of the more serious undead spirits will directly bite back at the wizard."

In a word, this could not go around for free.

"The nine levels of hell, each level corresponds to a wizard's circle. The lower the level of hell, the stronger the hell creatures are. This spell of mine won't involve the hell beyond the fourth level, so there shouldn't be a problem with safety..."

It was said that at the bottom of the Nine Hells, there was the legendary tenth layer, which was the deepest part of Hell.

At the same time, it was also the entrance to the Underworld, which was on par with the astral world.

At the location of the 'Underworld Gate', there was a guardian of the Underworld that was comparable to the gods guarding the entrance.

Logically speaking, be it wizards, mortals, or other living beings in the Multidimensional Planes, only a small number of souls were brought to the divine kingdom by the gods after death.

The other souls would go all the way down to the Nine Hells and enter the Underworld Source River, which was in charge of reincarnation and death, through the Underworld Gate!

In the Underworld Source River, all the memories of this life in the soul would be washed away by the water.

A brand new true soul was born, and it would be randomly reincarnated into the Multiverse.

This was a law that was like the law of nature.

Most of the time, the Underworld was neutral and objective, and would not participate in any disputes.

Therefore, it was extremely mysterious, and the wizards' understanding of the Underworld was limited.

After all, other than dead people... It was very difficult for wizards to enter the Underworld.

"Let's begin. If there is any danger, immediately terminate the summoning. Summoning spells have been tested by the wizard civilization for a long time. Generally, there won't be any accidents!"

After everything was ready.

Levi chanted.

Then, he closed his eyes.

...

The fourth level of Hell.

There were four pale suns in the sky, emitting the aura of death.

On the ground, there were strange-shaped hellish undead spirits lurking.

The undead spirit mainly relied on the death energy wandering in hell to survive, which was also a type of negative energy.

If they were lucky, they could even prey on the souls lost in hell.

In the wilderness, a battle was taking place.

An Undead knight made of bones was riding on a skeletal warhorse, leading a group of skeleton subordinates, such as skeleton swordsmen and skeleton archers, to fight against a flying dragon covered in rotten flesh and with a wingspan of dozens of meters.

Be it the Undead knights or the rotten flying dragon, they were all powerful third-circle creatures.

On the fourth floor, there were also elite monsters.

On the plains not far away, there was a castle.

Inside the castle, there was an army of Undead. It seemed that the Undead knight from before was also one of them.

On the battlements, a pitch-black [Barb Demon] with goat horns and a scorpion tail was watching the battle with great interest.

As the Devil Lord of the Black Sand Ridge...

Earl Sarlin's daily pleasure was to watch his subordinates kill those stupid undead creatures and let them kill each other.

There were two types of inhabitants in Hell.

The first type was undead creatures, such as undead skeletons and undead spirits. Undead knights and rotten flying dragons were both of this type. They were the main force of the School of Death wizards' summoned creatures.
