

Wolfless 168

Chapter 168 Time to Let Go

At that moment, Landon and Cameron stepped out of the elevator..

“I’ll handle this matter. You don’t need to worry about it,” Cameron said as he walked alongside Landon, discussing work.

Noticing the lingering trace of Charlotte’s pheromones in the air, Cameron frowned slightly. “Landon, Charlotte really does like you. I know you don’t feel the same, but no matter what she does in the future, I just hope you’ll let her off for my sake.”

Seeing Charlotte standing beside Tessa, Cameron spoke with concern.

“Cameron, between us friends, there’s no need to say all that. As long as she doesn’t hurt Tessa, I’ll turn a blind eye.”

He and Cameron had grown up together. For something this small, he could agree. But the condition was that Charlotte couldn’t hurt Tessa.

“Okay.”

Even with that answer, Cameron still felt uneasy.

Charlotte wasn’t someone who gave up easily. He had warned her again and again, but she never listened.

“Alright, let’s go.” Landon walked over to Tessa. When he spoke to her, his tone was noticeably different- softer and more tender than usual.

Charlotte saw it all, and her heart filled with bitter resentment.

“We should go too,” Cameron said to Charlotte.

She had insisted on coming with him to Thorne Corp just to catch a glimpse of Landon. Now she should finally give up.

“Cameron, I...”

Charlotte felt deeply wronged. She had worked so hard just to keep up with Landon’s pace, to stand by his side, to become a worthy Luna of the Nightshade Pack.

She only slept a few hours a day, trained relentlessly to grow stronger, studied hard to get into the best university, pushed herself to improve and become someone worthy of him. But he had never seen any of it.

His eyes were always on Tessa, someone with no family background, no personal strength, and a terrible reputation.

“Charlotte, feelings aren’t something you can control. It’s time to let go.” Landon had never brought a woman to the ninetieth floor—his private domain. Tessa was the only exception, and that already said everything.

Charlotte was unwilling, truly unwilling to give up, but at this moment, there was nothing she could do.

Still, the elders of the Thorne family and the Nightshade Pack would never accept Tessa.

“In any case, don’t hurt Tessa. Otherwise, even I won’t be able to protect you”

Though the Quest family was one of the four great families of Navoris, it was nowhere near the level of the Thorne family—the Alpha family of the Nightshade Pack.

Especially now, under Landon’s leadership, the Thorne family had grown even stronger, leaving the other three families far behind.

At present, Landon stood as the most powerful Alpha in Montedra. No one dared provoke him.

“Alright, I understand. I won’t hurt her.”

Charlotte answered, but in her heart she thought, As long as I don’t do it myself, what can anyone say? I’m not stupid.

Landon opened the car door for Tessa and helped her in.

“Are we heading to Wisteria Apartment?” It was already too late to go to school now.

“Yeah.”

Just after they got in the car, Tessa’s phone rang. It was Nico. She glanced at it and picked up the call.

“Why didn’t you come to school today? Are you feeling okay?” Nico asked with concern. Without realizing it, he had gotten used to paying attention to Tessa’s every move.

“No, I just had something to take care of, so I took the day off. What’s up?”

“Nothing much. I just wanted to ask if you’re coming to the lab after school?” It had only been an afternoon, but he already found himself missing her.

“I’m not going to the lab today.” Tessa thought about going to Lightwing Order later, and figured she probably wouldn’t have time.

It had been years since she last visited Lightwing Order. She wondered how it had changed. The thought brought a little flutter of anticipation.