My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1701-Rosalie smiled and answered, "Mary is worried. She asked about my condition."

Byron nodded and sat by the bed as he mentioned casually, "One of the doctors was missing when I was back. Did he tell you where he was going?"

Rosalie's smile froze.

She did not expect Byron to notice such a slight difference.

What did not occur to her was that he would even care about that.

After a momentary shock, Rosalie remained calm and said, "I'm not sure about that. It's fine as long as someone is outside. It won't make any difference even if one is missing."

Then, she continued helplessly, "I'm awake now. There's no need for so many experts to guard outside. Tell them to get some rest."

Byron took out an apple from the bag and peeled the skin. However, he looked worried.

According to what he knew about Rosalie, she would not request to eat something sweet when she just recovered from her illness or ask him to get something from a store that far.

He knew she needed some space, yet he had no idea why.

However, he did as told.

From the situation he had observed and the reaction of Rosalie and the experts, it was not difficult for him to guess what she had discussed with the experts.

The only thing she would have discussed with them was the poison in her. Realizing this, Byron's expression turned gloomy and he stopped peeling the apple.

"Has the poison in your body been cleared?"

He turned around and looked into Rosalie's eyes.

Startled, Rosalie smiled helplessly and said, "You noticed?"

She knew she could not keep it from Byron for long.

Unexpectedly, Byron noticed it so soon...

"I thought of telling you when I found a way to clear the poison."

She looked at the man apologetically and said, "I'm sorry. I promised to be frank with you, but I lied again."

Byron frowned and seemed to be pissed off. "Did Xander trick us again? Is the antidote fake?"

Rosalie shook her head. "The antidote is real, but..."

Byron asked impatiently, "But what?"

"He only provided us part of it. If we want to eliminate all the poison in my body, we need a few times the dosage he gave us."

Since Byron noticed it, Rosalie did not plan to hide it from him. "I've discussed with the experts and have something in mind. Don't worry."

Byron looked at her, worried. However, he soon calmed down and said, "I'm not anxious. At most, I'll negotiate with him again."

What Xander wanted was for Byron to yield.

It did not matter even if he had to give in once more.

Rosalie was touched to hear Byron say that. She caressed his pale face gently.

"You won't have to do that. I have the confidence to cure myself. Don't forget that I was the one who invented the drug that even the Lancer family failed to produce."

Moreover, before Xander and she were on bad terms, Xander had shown her some of the Lancer family's ancient medical books. Many strange and rare herbs were recorded in them.

Rosalie felt that might be the clue to the antidote.

Fortunately, she had memorized them.

After she got the report of the blood test, she could find out the component of the poison.

Then, producing an antidote for it would be easy.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1702-Byron had prepared himself for the worst.

He nodded. "I believe in you. You're an outstanding doctor, and Xander's poison is a piece of cake for you."

Rosalie thought she would have to convince Byron to get him to believe in her, but he agreed to her plan easier than she expected. She was a little taken aback.

Byron continued peeling the apple. "However, you must not keep it from me if anything happens during this process."

Rosalie snapped out of her daze and nodded obediently. "Sure."

Then, she looked at the man before her affectionately and said, "Hubby, thank you for trusting me."

Byron froze upon hearing that.

He was both happy and surprised, even doubting he heard things. He stared into her eyes and asked, "What did you call me?"

Rosalie did not know what was wrong with her, making her call him that.

She could not say that word again when he stared at her with his burning gaze. Her face flushed red as she looked away.

Byron did not plan to give up and put the apple down. He looked into her eyes and urged, "What did you call me just now? Repeat it."

"H-Hubby..."

Rosalie's face blushed as she stuttered. She was shy.

Suddenly, her phone rang.

It was the ringtone she had set for her little ones.

Rosalie grabbed Byron's hand and said, "It's a call from the kids. Answer it, quick."

She had not contacted the little ones for days, and they might be worried.

Although Byron told them she was on a business trip, Lucian and Nox had always been sensitive and intelligent. They might overthink.

Byron could only let go of Rosalie and answer the call, but his gaze was still on Rosalie.

“Mommy!”

The little kids’ cute voices came through the phone once the call went through.

Rosalie answered gently, “It’s me. Have you been obedient while I was away?”

The children finally heard her voice. They told her what had happened these few days.

‘We’ve been good and even helped Grandma Zora wash plates.’

“I helped too.”

“I helped Grandma Zora match her outfits.”

The little ones chatted through the phone.

Rosalie smiled upon hearing the cute and energetic voices of her children.” Good.”

“Mommy, when will you be back? We miss you so much.”

The triplets sounded disappointed.

Rosalie glanced at the man before her, not knowing how to answer that.

“Daddy said you’d be back tonight. Are you really coming back tonight?”

Lucian asked.

Rosalie pondered for a few seconds before answering with a smile, “Yes. I’m already at the airport. I’ll be back at Coast City tonight. Wait for me at home. I’ll bring gifts for you all.”

The little ones were obedient and said, “Okay. We’ll go to bed after you reach home, Mommy.”

Rosalie smiled and diverted the topic as she asked how their lives had been, i

The kids shared everything over the phone.

Only when it was almost lunchtime did they hang up the call reluctantly.

Rosalie looked sad when she looked at the phone screen.

“I want to go back home tonight.”

She looked at Byron, trying to get his opinion. “If I don’t show up, the kids will be worried.”

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1703-“You’re just getting better and haven’t fully recovered.”

Byron’s eyebrows were knitted, and he disagreed.

Rosalie patiently explained, “I know what I’m doing. I can get out of bed and walk now.”

The two were in a standoff.

After debating for a while, Byron compromised. “You can’t leave the hospital. If you’re worried, I can ask Luther to bring them to the hospital.”

Rosalie hesitated upon hearing that suggestion. “They’ll know I’m ill if they come here.”

She did not want to worry the kids.

Byron pondered momentarily and suggested, “Just say you got a cold and fever after getting off the plane, and I asked you to go to the hospital.

They’re kids and won’t know much.”

Rosalie did not think it was a good idea. However, she agreed since Byron had said so.

Byron called Luther immediately.

Luther had just sent Mary and Chloe back. Just as he parked the car below the hospital, he got a call from Byron.

“Sir, I’ve driven Miss Lincoln and Miss Wilson back home.”

Luther reported as soon as the call went through.

“Okay. Please go to the manor again this evening and fetch the children.” Luther froze. “Didn’t you say we should keep the little lady and masters from knowing this?”

Would they not be letting them know Rosalie was ill by bringing them to the hospital?

Byron did not deny it. “When you pick them up, tell them Rosie caught a fever when she got off the plane and is in the hospital.”

Luther said nothing more since Byron had decided and thought of a plan.

When it was almost time, Luther headed to Lawrence Manor.

The car pulled over at the manor, and the three little ones approached excitedly.

Their smiles faded when they saw it was Luther. “Uncle Luther, it’s you!”

Luther noticed the kids’ expressions and felt sorry for them. “Let’s go. I’ll take you to your daddy and mommy.”

The little ones had broad smiles on their faces. However, they were soon disappointed. “Mommy asked us to wait for her at home.”

Lucian looked at Luther and asked, “Uncle Luther, did something happen to Mommy?”

Otherwise, why would their mommy not pick up their calls for days and even ask Luther to pick them up?

Nox and Estelle felt uneasy upon hearing their brother’s question. They stared at Luther, waiting for an answer.

Luther felt guilty facing the kids’ gazes, but he had to answer their question.

“It is not that serious. While returning, Mrs. Lawrence caught a fever, and Mr. Lawrence took her to the hospital for a check-up. You guys don’t have to worry about it.”

The little ones did not quite believe it.

Luther could only say, “If you guys are worried, why don’t you go to the hospital? If something has happened to Mrs. Lawrence, why would they ask me to drive you guys there?”

The kids’ believed him reluctantly and informed Mrs. Zora before they left.

They were worried and in a moody state all the way to the hospital.

Luther felt guilty and sighed silently, not knowing how to comfort the kids.

The little ones had no idea they almost lost their mommy a day ago...

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1704-The car pulled over at the hospital.

Luther got out of the car and wanted to carry the little ones down.

However, they had already gotten out of the car and were staring at him, waiting for him to take them to their mommy.

Looking at the little ones' anxious expressions, Luther sighed and felt bad. He touched the kids' heads, trying to comfort them. "Let's go upstairs."

The little ones nodded obediently and followed him.

When they were in the elevator, Luther texted Byron. 1

Byron was already waiting for them when the elevator door opened on the top floor.

"Daddy!"

The kids ran out of the elevator excitedly when they saw their daddy and hugged him.

Byron touched the little ones' heads and nodded at Luther. 'Thank you. Have a day off tomorrow.'

Luther nodded and closed the elevator door. He left the family of five alone.

"Daddy, where's Mommy?"

Luther tugged Byron's shirt anxiously and urged.

Byron looked at them and said, "In the ward."

Then, he took the kids to Rosalie.

The children followed behind him.

Tears rolled down the kids' cheeks when they were in the ward and saw their mommy on the bed.

"Mommy, what happened to you? We were so worried."

Daddy and Mommy had not been at home these two days, and their mommy did not answer their calls. The kids had been obedient, yet they were worried deep down.

They could bear it no more when they saw the pale Rosalie.

Rosalie did not expect the kids to react like this and felt sorry to see this. She sat up and wanted to get off the bed.

Her children stopped her by dashing to the bed as they said, "Mommy, lie down quickly."

Rosalie wiped off their tears and said, "Stop crying. Mommy is fine. It's just that I've been busy these two days and caught a fever. I'll be fine again after resting for two days."

Then, she smiled and said, "Look! Mommy is fine."

Estelle sobbed and said, "But... Mommy, you look pale..."

It was just like when she was unconscious the last time.

The little girl recalled what happened the last time and was afraid. She held Rosalie's sleeve tight, unwilling to let go.

Rosalie felt bad, and tears shimmered in her eyes. "Mommy is fine. Have you forgotten that I'm a great doctor? I can treat any illness, not to mention fever."

She grabbed the little ones' hands and touched her forehead. "Here. The fever has subsided."

The kids touched her forehead and nodded as they sobbed.

Rosalie smiled and comforted them, saying, "Why don't you guys go back home obediently? I'll return home in two days after a good rest."

Nox shook his head. "We want to accompany Mommy here!"

Estelle nodded. "Estie wants to take care of Mommy!"

Lucian sobbed and said nothing as he looked at Rosalie.

Rosalie stroked the kids' heads one after another. "No. Mommy has just recovered from a fever, and it might be contagious. I don't have the strength to treat you all if you fall ill."

The little ones pouted their lips stubbornly and stared at her, wanting to be by her side.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1705-Rosalie looked at the kids' worried expressions and felt sad. She looked away, trying not to cry.

"I asked Uncle Luther to bring you here because I don't want you to be worried. You can rest assured since you've seen that I'm just fine. If you stay back and get a fever, I'll be worried."

Nox was reluctant to leave.

Lucian spoke out, "Let's go back. Mommy, please take good care of yourself."

Nox and Estelle said nothing more no matter how reluctant they were since their eldest brother had decided.

Rosalie felt relieved and smiled as she nodded. "Okay. I'll take good care of myself and go back home soon."

"Don't forget to answer our calls!" Lucian stated his condition.

Rosalie knew the kids were worried sick about her since they had lost contact with her for two days. She felt terrible and agreed readily.

Getting her promise made the kids feel more at ease, and she gave in. They reluctantly let go of her hands.

Rosalie did not dare to look at them. She quickly diverted her gaze to Byron. "Byron, why don't you drive them back?"

She was afraid she might cry if the little ones stayed here any longer.

Actually, she had to be by the kids' side because they were sad.

However, she could not get discharged that night. Thus, she could only let Byron take care of them.

Byron also feared the kids finding out what had happened to Rosalie when he saw the kids' reaction.

However, he adjusted his mood and nodded upon hearing Rosalie's voice.

"Daddy will take good care of Mommy. You kids will be doing us a great favor by being obedient at home."

He touched the little ones' heads and carried Estelle. Then, he stretched out his hands toward Nox and Lucian.

Nox held his hand while Lucian held his brother's hand obediently.

Then, the kids turned around and looked at Rosalie again.

Rosalie smiled as she waved them goodbye. She felt like crying, but she held back her tears.

She had almost lost her life and the chance to watch them grow...

Looking at Byron and the kids leaving made Rosalie more determined to cure herself.

She had to do it, even if it was for the sake of the kids.

The little ones finally had their parents, and she did not want them to lose their mother.

Meanwhile, Byron took the kids to his car and headed to the manor.

On the way, the children sobbed, and the atmosphere in the car was gloomy.

Byron glanced at the kids through the rearview mirror and found that their eyes were red. It broke his heart to see that.

"I promised you that I'll take good care of Mommy."

He promised the kids.

Nox sniffled and said in his cute but hoarse voice, "Okay. We believe in Daddy. Daddy always took good care of Mommy whenever she was ill."

Their daddy had accompanied their mommy the last few times she was ill, and their mommy had made it through each time.

This time would be the same!

Byron felt a complicated feeling rising him upon hearing the kids' words of trust. He smiled and said, "Of course."

If the kids knew Rosalie had almost died because of him, they might not trust him like this...

Byron promised them everything they asked for heavy-heartedly.

He looked at the kids through the rearview mirror when he noticed that their voices were getting softer.

All the crying seemed to have exhausted them, and the triplets had fallen asleep.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1706-Byron looked to the side once more but met Lucian's gaze.

Their eyes met. As stoic as Byron was, he was stunned for a moment. "Are you still awake?"

He thought that the three little ones were all asleep.

Lucian's eyes were red, but he put on a sullen face, trying to look serious.

"Daddy, the truth is, Mommy has been sick for days, hasn't she?"

Byron's expression froze slightly, hesitating whether to tell the truth to the little boy.

Lucian was indeed the most mature of the three children.

The best way to confess to Lucian would be to explain the situation to him first.

However, the boy had just finished crying so badly. Byron felt that this was not a good time to confess.

After a few moments of silence, Byron finally continued withholding the truth. "No, don't think too much. Mommy just has a cold and a fever. She'll get better soon."

Just as he finished speaking, the little boy questioned him again, "But Mommy has never been on such a long business trip before."

Byron said without changing his expression, "That's because she was worried nobody would take care of you if she left for too long. Now that she has Daddy, she can rest assured."

When Lucian heard this, he had a thoughtful expression on his face.

'Indeed. Last time, Mommy wouldn't travel for too long because we were waiting for her at home.

'Now that we're living with Daddy, Mommy can feel at ease.

'But...'

He just felt that something was not right.

Byron was driving as he looked at the little guy in the rearview mirror occasionally. There was hesitation in his heart.

"When Mommy was in a coma last time, there was a heavy feeling in our hearts. We felt the same way too this time."

Lucian frowned and muttered to himself.

'If Mommy just has a fever and a cold, we wouldn't feel this way.

'This feeling has been lingering since days ago.'

The little boy became more and more convinced that Mommy did not just have a fever.

He noticed that Daddy did not intend to tell him the truth, so he sensibly stopped asking. He just said, "No matter what happened to Mommy, as long as Daddy is around, I believe Daddy will take good care of Mommy. Daddy, we believe in you"

This was exactly what Nox said.

Every time Mommy got sick before, she would be safe and sound under Daddy's care in the end.

He believed that it would be the same this time!

Byron became speechless over the little boy's absolute trust.

Lucian did not mind. Instead, he became more serious. "Daddy, don't worry. You just be with Mommy. I'll take good care of my younger brother and sister! Daddy, you must make sure Mommy is alright!"

At the end of his little speech, the boy's tone sounded like he was about to crack.

Byron raised his eyes and glanced at the rearview mirror. His heart ached when he saw teardrops hanging from the corners of the little boy's eyes.

"I know. Daddy will make sure Mommy is alright. I'll protect Mommy even if I have to pay with my life!"

Lucian reluctantly shook his head. "No! Both Daddy and Mommy must be fine! We want Mommy to return, and Daddy can't leave us either!"

Byron felt moved by his son's words. He comforted the boy. "Yes, Daddy and Mommy will come back together. Don't you worry."

The little boy wept as he nodded.

Byron sent them back to the manor. When the little ones woke up, they all felt sad.

Byron was worried. He decided to watch over them wash up and tuck them back in their beds. He waited for them to fall asleep before he got up to leave.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1707-Rosalie was still awake when Byron returned to the hospital.

He quickened his pace when he saw the bright lights in the ward.

"Why aren't you resting?" With a little worry in his eyes, he looked at the woman on the hospital bed who was lost in her thoughts.

Rosalie came back to her senses upon hearing his voice. She pursed her lips and smiled. "I've been sleeping for three to four days straight. I can't sleep anymore."

Then, she asked about the children, "How are the kids? Are they asleep?"

Byron said, "I came here only after I made sure they were asleep."

Rosalie felt relieved. Her heart ached as she looked at him. "You look almost as bad as me. You should've slept well at home tonight."

For those who were unaware, one might think Byron was the one who was critically ill, judging from the look on his face.

He heard this, subconsciously wiped his face, and frowned indifferently. "I've had several sleepless nights before over some business discussions in the past. This isn't a big deal."

He went to the hospital bed and sat down, looking at the woman in front of him with a soft gaze. "Besides, you're still in the hospital. How can I leave you alone? Even if I dare, the kids won't spare me."

Rosalie looked at him puzzled, wondering what this had to do with the kids.

With a deep smile, Byron told her what the little boy said in the car just now.

Rosalie's heart softened to know that the little one defended her so much." I was afraid they would be frightened to find out, but I never expected..." Then, she smiled and looked at Byron mid-sentence. "Not only are they unafraid, but they're confident because you're here."

Perhaps this was the power of a father.

The two looked at each other and smiled.

Rosalie moved to the side of the bed. "It's getting late. Come here and rest for a while. Your dark circles are almost as big as a panda's."

Byron did not move. "Don't worry. Since you can't sleep, let me seek your opinion."

His expression turned heavy. Rosalie followed suit and became serious." What's the matter?"

Byron frowned slightly and carefully considered the words he was about to say.

After a few minutes, his deep voice echoed. 'Xander's second request is for your research institute to resume cooperation with them. To get the antidote, I've already drawn up a unilateral contract termination statement. We just need to release..."

"I don't agree." Rosalie interrupted before he could finish.

Byron stopped talking and looked at her helplessly. "You don't have to worry in terms of funds. The liquidated damages given by Lawrence Corporation and Quirke Enterprise will absolutely be satisfactory to you. You can use the money to increase employee benefits. It doesn't matter if you take the profits from Lancer Corporation or not."

Rosalie's face was stern. "I'm the person in charge of the research institute. If you want to terminate the contract with the research institute, then I'll continue to find another partner. I will never consider Lancer Corporation!"

Rosalie had already decided not to interact with Xander in the future after discovering what a nasty piece of work he was!

Xander wanted to use this to threaten them. It was all the more reason for Rosalie to not let him succeed!

Due to her resolute demeanor, Byron was silent for a few seconds with some hesitation in his eyes. "I understand how you feel, but this isn't the time to cut ties with Xander."

Rosalie would still be useful to Xander if the Lancers could form a collaboration with the research institute.

If they were unable to develop the antidote in the future, she could still obtain it from Xander.

Rosalie was determined. "If we give in to his request this time, he'll make even more unreasonable demands the next time we ask for the antidote. Should we agree to everything?"

Then, she questioned Byron with dissatisfaction, ' Didn't you say you believe in me? Since I said it, I'll make it happen!"

Byron already knew that Xander would do this, but he accepted the terms for the sake of Rosalie's survival.

Now, he gradually gained confidence seeing how determined his woman was.

The two looked at each other for a long time, and Byron made a concession. "Alright, then we'll do as you said. That statement is invalid, and our partnership remains."

A smile appeared on Rosalie's face when he compromised.

Byron stood up after they concluded this matter.

Rosalie thought he was coming to bed with her, so she scooted aside to make space.

Byron looked longingly at her. "I want to accept my wife's invitation, but you've only just recovered. This bed is so small, so I'd better not squash you. I'll just sleep on the sofa."

Without waiting for Rosalie to react, the man turned and went to the sofa by the door.

Rosalie blushed as she belatedly realized what he called her.

As she watched him lie down on the sofa, she slowly lay back down.

Byron raised his hand to turn off the lights, and the ward was plunged into darkness.

The two of them were lost in their thoughts, and neither of them slept.

Early the next morning, Xander logged onto social media and waited for updates about Lawrence Corporation and the research institute.

According to their agreement, Byron would release a statement on the internet about the partnership termination at this hour.

However, he waited for more than an hour and there was no statement from the Lawrence Corporation.

Xander remembered there was no news about the marriage as well, and his expression turned cold. "Byron Lawrence! How dare you..."

'Rosalie's life is still in my hands. How dare you fool me, Byron?'

Thinking of this, Xander pulled a long face and called his assistant. "Call Byron Lawrence!"

He wanted to clarify things with Byron. 'What's the meaning of this?'

Frightened by his temper, the assistant quickly took out his mobile phone and called Byron.

On the other side, Byron and Rosalie stayed up all night. They opened their eyes and sat up at the break of dawn.

Rosalie continued to think about the antidote formula.

Byron finally had time to deal with Lawrence Corporation's affairs.

The two were immersed in their thoughts when the phone rang.

Byron came back to his senses and glanced at the caller ID. His face darkened, and hesitation flashed across his eyes.

"Is it Xander?"

Rosalie looked over immediately as well. She knew who was on the line from the change in his expression.

Byron frowned and gave a silent nod.

Rosalie put away her thoughts and said, "I'll call him back. I have something to say to him too."

Byron hesitated for a moment and finally hung up.

On the other end, the assistant looked at the disconnected call. He was troubled. "Mr. Lancer, President Lawrence... didn't answer the call."

Xander was furious. "That *sshole! How dare he play me?! I will never let him go!"

The assistant lowered his head and held his breath.

The atmosphere in the office was cold and imposing.

Suddenly, Xander's cell phone rang.

Xander glanced angrily. When he saw the caller ID, the corner of his brows twitched.

Xander was full of suspicion. The phone rang for a while before he picked it up.

"Awake already, Miss Jacobs?"

On the other end, Rosalie's voice was full of anger.

"Xander, I overestimated you. As the heir to the Lancer family and as a doctor, I never imagined you'd use your medical skills to poison me! Aren't you ashamed of abusing the Lancer family's century-old legacy?"

Xander's eyes turned cold from her condemnation. The corners of his lips slowly curled up. "You're still able to throw accusations at me. You seem quite energetic!"

Rosalie shot back coldly. "It's all thanks to you!"

Xander narrowed his eyes slightly and sneered. "Since you know that I did it, then you should know that your life is still in my hands! You'd better be polite to me!"

Then, he asked in a cold voice, "Where is Byron? Put him on the phone!"

Rosalie refused without hesitation. "He has nothing to say to you! This is between you and me, Xander. Don't even try to use me to threaten him!"

She would never allow herself to be anyone's weakness!

Xander sniggered with indignation at her tough attitude. "How silly. Why do you think you woke up? Byron probably hasn't told you yet, but he agreed to my three conditions. That's how you got the antidote from me!"

He thought Rosalie was oblivious, so he said arrogantly, "To get you the antidote, Byron has agreed to terminate the cooperation with your research institute, and he's already married to another woman!"

'I don't know the authenticity of the marriage certificate yet, but I can still trigger Rosalie with it!'

He thought that Rosalie would be affected by this. He did not expect her to be so calm about it.

"I know all of this, so just give up okay? I'm the person in charge of the research institute. Even if the research institute terminates our cooperation with Lawrence Corporation, I'll never work with you."

Rosalie planned to keep Byron's fake marriage a secret first.

Xander was furious. 'Do you have a death wish? Rosalie, do you think that what Byron got yesterday is the complete antidote?'

Rosalie's tone was firm. "Of course, I know the truth of the matter, but I'll develop the antidote with my ability. I'm in charge of my own life!"

Xander was silent for a few seconds. Then, he burst out laughing wildly as if he heard some joke.

"Develop the antidote? You should stop dreaming! Do you think the Lancer family's ancestral secret technique is child's play? Even Quentin Luke can't do anything about it, not to mention you!"

Rosalie's face darkened when Xander belittled her teacher. "I'm Professor Luke's disciple. If I can unravel your poison formula, my teacher won't have a problem either. I didn't tell him only because I don't want him to worry. You'd better show some respect!"

Xander snorted coldly. "Since you're so confident, then give it a try. If you don't get the second vial of antidote before tonight, the poison will kill you. Don't come crying to me then!"

With that, he hung up the phone without giving Rosalie a chance to respond.

He refused to believe her. Apart from him, no one else in the world would be able to figure out the formula for his poison!

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1710-The call disconnected, and Byron's expression froze slightly. There was so much he wanted to say.

He held his tongue in the end after some consideration.

His woman needed to focus on finding a way to develop an antidote now.

As for the rest, he would take care of it.

Worst-case scenario, he would just bow down to Xander again.

Rosalie noticed that he was still visibly worried, so she comforted him softly, saying, "The blood test results should be out soon. I'll find a solution. N

Byron's face softened slightly. "I believe in you."

There was silence again in the ward.

Byron knew that Rosalie was thinking about the antidote again, so he kept quiet so as to not disturb her again.

Suddenly, there was a knock on the door.

Rosalie put her thoughts aside and looked at the door in puzzlement, thinking that Mary came back after a night's rest.

Byron stood up and opened the door.

He felt instantly more relaxed when he saw the person at the door.

"Byron, Old Master Loewe may have discovered some ingredients used in Xander's poison!"

Andrius was excited at first, then he paused as he belatedly realized something. His face gradually became worried. "How is Sister-in-law's situation? We're not late, are we?"

Then, he cautiously looked at Byron's expression and muttered to himself. "It should... shouldn't be too late, right? Otherwise, you wouldn't look like this."

Before Byron opened his mouth, Rosalie's voice came from inside.

"Is it Andrius? Why don't you come in?"

She felt strange because she heard Andrius talking at the door for a long time but could not see him.

Andrius breathed a sigh of relief upon hearing her voice. Then, he was shocked once more. "Sister-in-law, you woke up? Have you gotten the antidote?"

He looked at the person in front of him in disbelief.

Byron did not say a word. He just nodded respectfully to Old Master Loewe behind him, turned around, and led them into the ward.

Andrius was very excited to see Rosalie sitting on the bed.

"Sister-in-law, you've woken up! We were so worried about you the past few days! I thought... Oh, never mind. I'm glad you are awake. How do you feel now? Do you feel unwell anywhere?"

Rosalie could not help feeling tickled by his excitement. "Sorry for making you worry. I feel much better now."

After that, she looked curiously at the person behind Andrius. She hesitated. "I seem to have heard you say... Old Master Loewe? Is that truly who I think it is?"

Only then did the two men remember to make an introduction for Old Master Loewe.

Andrius took a step back and stood diagonally behind the old man. He said to Rosalie, "That's right, this is the North Atacan Medicine King, Mr. Calian Loewe. He's here to treat you."

'Calian Loewe?'

Rosalie was shocked to hear this name.

“Ha, North Atacan Medicine King? I can’t even figure out a poison made by a brat. I’ve disgraced that title!”

Old Master Loewe stayed up several nights in a row reading as many medical texts as he could. He was already fatigued, and the aggravation of not being able to develop the antidote made him appear unhappy.

Byron comforted him graciously, saying, “Sir, don’t blame yourself. Xander Lancer told us that he developed this poison from the Lancer family’s ancient medical books. It isn’t your fault that you can’t solve it.”

Old Master Loewe frowned slightly and felt a sudden burst of emotions.” Ah, so that’s the case! No wonder... No wonder I couldn’t find what I wanted even after searching every medical book I could!”
