Wrong Table 1481

Chapter 1481 Fallen for Him

Roselynn nodded as she was also curious about what Mackenzie wanted to talk to her.

In fact, she was in a state of inner conflict, uncertain about her next steps. She was glad Mackenzie was sensible and started the topic.

The two of them entered Mackenzie's room while holding hands, leaving Emmanuel alone.

"Roselynn, I know it's hard to make a decision, but I really want to know your real thoughts." Mackenzie was straightforward. "Sometimes your biggest enemy is yourself, not someone else. With unwavering determination, we can overcome many challenges.

Yet, wavering convictions can easily impede progress."

Upon hearing Mackenzie's words, Roselynn's eyes brightened with understanding.

Her current indecision weighed heavily on her. If she was determined, perhaps she wouldn't have a tough time now.

"You've fallen for Julian, haven't you?" Mackenzie asked directly.

As a woman herself, she understood women well. If Roselynn wasn't truly holding affection for Julian but simply considered him as a flatterer, she wouldn't have attended Zaiden's birthday banquet and even put efforts in preparing the gift.

"I'm not sure. Perhaps you're right."

Roselynn wanted to gloss over, but Mackenzie was not easy to deal with. She quickly asked, "Let me ask you some questions. You must answer me immediately without hesitation."

Roselynn nodded obediently as she looked into her domineering eyes.

"Firstly, if he gives you a gift which is not very expensive, would you accept it? Three, two…"

As Mackenzie counted down, Roselynn instantly nodded.

If it were in the past, she wouldn't have accepted Julian's gifts. However, she had actually accepted his flowers today.

"Okay. Secondly, if you accidentally witness him talking to other women, would you leave immediately or wonder about their relationship? Three…"

“I will wonder about their relationship.” Roselynn gave her response even faster this time.

Mackenzie’s lips curved slightly. Although she could guess Roselynn’s answer to the next question, she still asked, “If Julian entered the hospital, would you set your work aside and visit him?”

“I… I think yes. After all, I don’t need to seek permission for taking leave now.” Roselynn tried to find an excuse.

“Then that’s it.” Mackenzie came to the conclusion despite Roselynn’s arguments. “You have fallen for him. I underwent the same thing before, so I’m clear about it.”

Roselynn showed a complex smile. Despite her age and experience in love and marriage surpassing Mackenzie, Mackenzie seemed to be the one who was more experienced.

Nevertheless, she acquiesced to Mackenzie’s conclusion.

In fact, she also admitted that she had fallen for Julian. She just sought external validation of her emotions.

“Since you acknowledge your feelings, don’t delay further. The Roselynn I know is a resilient woman full of vitality. Embrace this opportunity before it slips away.”

Mackenzie tried to encourage Roselynn.

Since both Roselynn and Julian had feelings for each other, Mackenzie hoped they could have a good outcome.

Besides, Alessandra’s concerns were also understandable. Roselynn is approaching 31 years old. If she didn’t get married soon, she would become an elderly pregnant woman in the future.

As women aged, society often perceived them as less valuable. Furthermore, certain opportunities tended to vanish permanently if not seized in time.

Hence, Mackenzie was determined to help Roselynn.

“Well…”

Roselynn wasn’t particularly hesitant. However, she wouldn’t approach Julian hastily and declare her willingness to be his girlfriend.

Luckily, unlike Emmanuel, Mackenzie immediately understood her concerns. She then said with a smile, “If you’re certain, leave the rest to me.”

Before long, Emmanuel received Mackenzie’s message. He then headed toward Alessandra’s room.

Julian was having a great conversation with Alessandra.

It seemed he was different from the other rich man. He bore no biases based on social status and exuded refinement.